Host With The Most

By Archie L. Tucker
'Bent Miles

Are you a writer? Do you have a site where you perform a labor of love creating and publishing your works? Is your site hosted by folks that act as if they are doing you a favor for hosting you? Are they indifferent and or inept at meeting your needs? Are they behind the times?

If you are dissatisfied with your host, you may want to consider www.hostgator.com. The support there is nothing short of phenomenal. The concern expressed by each of their workers is as if each worker owned a part of the company. I can see why they can advertise "eating up the competition". A company would have to be extraordinarily phenomenal to take away their customers.

You can reach them 24/7 and there is no next day reply. It is almost immediate. Then there is the chat service which is in real time.

Need help getting your site squared away? They act like that is just all a part of the service. Need more space? It is unlimited. All of this and more for just five dollars more than what I was paying at my other host. Oh, there are no transfer fees for your main domain and the first year domain registration is free.

If you have been reading 'Bent Miles at all, you know I stuff each issue with pictures. Though I use a great little resizer to reduce the file size of my photos, the sheer number of photos hogs the space. I used to be concerned about using all of my space and having to make a decision on whether to get rid of some of my pages or spring for more space. I no longer have to be concerned about this, because at www.hostgator.com I have unlimited disk space.

Need to know how to do something? I am amazed at the number of online tutorials they have to educate the customer. And believe me when I tell you: you are treated like, "THE CUSTOMER"!

Do I sound like I feel I've made a great decision by going to www.hostgator.com? You bet I do!
