

‘Bent Miles

My Two Cents

The Unimaginable

By:
Archie L. Tucker

Can you imagine 700 billion dollars? I have a hard time imagining a million dollars. Oh sure, I know where all the commas and the decimal point go. I just can't fathom that amount of dollars. And if you agree that is a lot, just wait; it keeps getting larger. Does the number 850 billion ring a bell?

I'm just an old country boy. But, I do believe most of us have an inborn sense of fair-play and what is right and wrong and what will and won't work. This is especially true if our view is not tainted with any expected monetary greed.

I'll give you an example: As a small boy growing up with all the adults around me smoking, I—innately—realized smoking was dangerous. However, this realization didn't prevent me from partaking of the ill-weed any more than the folks in Fannie May and Freddie Mack resisted the temptation of, not only stupidity, but outright fraud. I'm convinced this mess was not perpetrated by a few folks who made honest mistakes.

All of the high rollers were well educated and intelligent. They have no more excuse for their actions than the politicians who took their campaign contributions and looked the other way, Obama and Hillary Clinton being among the top twelve.

Thank God, I was not around for the great depression. However, the generation before me was. I remember hearing folks talking about how it was a time when men didn't want to not support their families; but, there were no jobs for them to make that necessary income. I also remember hearing about the government programs designed to give folks jobs.

The difference we are seeing here is that the politicians are not trying to give solutions. They are trying to throw money at it in hopes it will go away or just hold off till they get out of office.

Because the politicians have taken, what I consider bribes, and turned their heads for so long, no amount of money thrown to the wolves—who couldn't manage the money they had in the first place—is going to fix the problem. The market has to find its own level.

The chips must be allowed to fall where they may. Those greed mongers who started this mess must be allowed to fall. Then they must be investigated for wrongdoing and prosecuted.

Those—in the market place—who are strong will survive and those watching the markets that have true talents will raise and replace the aforementioned greed mongers.

Now that, I'm assuming the bill for the theft of public funds will pass, these billions of dollars have been squandered, where will our government get the money to provide jobs for those who need them till the market corrects itself?

I fear that stupidity, greed, and poor judgment may well have laid the platform that ushers in the one of whom the bible speaks in Revelations. I know; I know. There are those of you who are saying, just where does this non-securities-type get off telling us how the market works. Now, he surely must be a quack bringing in the bible, just another one of those crack-pots spouting judgment and the end times.

As Jesus Christ said, no one but the Father knows the time of Christ's return. Jesus, himself, doesn't even know. However, we do know that in the end time one with indescribable powers will come into office. He will get his power directly from satan.

This powerful person will be given a time to rule the world. He will fix all the ills of mankind. He will be exalted. The earth will be under a one world government of which this false prophet will be the ruler. How does one have a one world government with multiple currencies and monetary systems?

What better way to prove ones powers than to deliver the world out of their financial crisis, and feed the starving?

While there is no way to tell when this will actually take place, an intelligent observer, can see that some of the foundations necessary to usher in this false prophet(one world ruler) are already in place. Anyone care to guess what the European Union is? How about, the Euro? Today we have the technology to access all of a soldier's medical records from a chip in his dog tags.

We can implant a tracking device as small as a grain of rice under the skin of our pets. That device can be read to reveal to whom the pet belongs.

According to Revelations, this ruler will cause men and women to take the mark of the beast on the back of their hand or their forehead. Without this mark, folks will not be able to buy or sell. Could this be a chip that is scanned anytime to try to access your accounts?

Will this particular crisis reveal the Antichrist or the false prophet? I don't know. But, it will certainly be another step in the direction of laying down the support system for him to come into power.

If you would like to read more about this topic, start at the end of your bible in a book called Revelations.